

Darwin Laurencio

Short Biography

He is the current Network Engineer of the University of the Philippines Manila handling the network infrastructure and operations. A network specialist who led several infrastructure projects to enhance the network connectivity of the university. He is also tasked to administer the network security and implement the acceptable use policy of IT resources of the university. He is the lead technical person for the weekly webinar sessions conducted by the College of Medicine, a continuing medical education program for medical practitioners such as doctors, nurses, etc. approved by the Philippine Medical Association (PMA) and the Philippine Regulatory Commission (PRC).

He is also the chief engineer for teleconferencing activities of the university including the Philippine General Hospital where numerous doctors are participating on Telemedicine sessions of different local and international organizations.